Find something memorable, join a community doing good. They say human beings don't come with an instruction manual. We beg to differ! Your astrology chart holds the key to your personality and path. What is an astrology birth chart? An astrology birth chart—also called an astrology natal chart—is a map of where all the planets were in their journey around the Sun (from our vantage point on earth) at the exact moment you were born. An astrology chart reading can reveal your strengths and weaknesses, your opportunities for soul growth, the best timing for your most important moves. Calculating your astrology birth chart To calculate your astrology birth chart, you'll need your time, date and place of birth. Some people don't know their birth time. If you can't find it on your birth certificate, you can try contacting the Vital Records office in your state or area of birth. And if that still doesn't work, make as close of an estimate as you can or enter 12:00 noon. Without a birth time, you won't be able to accurately learn your rising sign, or ascendant. Nor will you correctly know which houses the planets in your chart fall in. But there is still a LOT of data you can glean by entering your date and location of birth—so don't let that stop you from checking out your astrology natal chart. VIDEO: Learn to Read Your Astrology Birth Chart with The AstroTwins Download supplemental PDFs mentioned in the video: What can an astrologer see in your astrology birth chart? Astrology birth charts can turn up surprising insight about your patterns and preferences. They're an excellent way of understanding your own "blind spots" and using that knowledge for personal growth and self-improvement. You can learn which talents to develop and where you may have weak spots to develop. What an astrologer looks for in a birth chart: What zodiac sign and which of the 12 houses each planet in the chart is in Venus, Mars and the moon's zodiac sign and house for love Saturn for where you may need to work harder, Jupiter for where you could be lucky The "aspects" or angles formed between any two planets If there's a "stellium" (3 or more planets in one sign), which creates a heavy concentration of one specific energy for the person The balance of elements (planets in fire, earth, air and water signs) in the chart The balance of qualities in the chart (planets in cardinal, mutable or fixed signs) The pattern formed by the planets (there are 7 classical chart "shapes") An astrologer will add up the elements and qualities and "score" the chart. If there's a lack of one trait or a predominance of another, they'll advise the client on how to practically bring more equilibrium into their lives. We call this Astro-Ayurveda, because it's the art of balancing your chart! The power of transits in your astrology birth chart There are two times when it's especially fruitful to look over your astrology chart: at the beginning of every year and on your birthday. For the new year, we'd suggest doing what's called a transit chart (also called a "natal plus transits" chart). This may require the guidance of a professional astrologer because the interpretation work can get complex! In this case, you start with your own natal (birth) chart, and compare it to the transiting (moving) planets, i.e., the current positions of the planets in the sky. In the example below, the inner wheel (with blue planetary symbols) is our birth chart—which is a fixed map that never changes. The orange planetary symbols in the outer wheel represent the transiting (moving) planets on January 1, 2019. A trained astrologer would compare and contrast the two charts. When a transiting (orange) planet makes contact with one of the natal (blue) planets, it activates specific energy, one that can be either opportune or challenging. Knowing this allows you to plan ahead. In this example at what would be 9:00 pm on a clock, a trained astrologer would see that transiting Saturn (which rules leadership and authority) was making contact with the natal chart's ascendant/rising sign, something that only occurs every 29 years. Advice would be given accordingly—in this case, to get very serious about personal goals, since Saturn is moving through the chart's first house of self. (Like we said—this can take years of practice or a trained astrological eye to interpret, but the foresight can be a game-changer!) Another way to use transit charts Transit charts aren't only for New Year's Day, though. You can plug in any date, past or future, and run a transit chart that compares the planets in motion your birth chart. Transit charts are super helpful for planning. If you're picking a wedding date, booking travel or scheduling an important career move, check out the transit chart to see if the skies are clear. Transit charts are also great for historical perspective: You can look back at important moments in your life—new love, relocations, deaths, breakups, career coups, job losses. Do a chart (or an estimated one) to see what was happening in the stars then. Example of a natal plus transit chart (via Astro-Seek) What other kinds of astrology birth charts are there? Solar Return Charts Also known as your "birthday chart," the solar return chart gives you a one-year chart that lasts from your current birthday until your next one. These charts will vary depending on location. Align your celebrations with the stars for best results! Watch a simple video tutorial on solar return charts here > Compatibility Astrology Charts In addition to the astrology birth chart, you can do an astrology compatibility chart to see how you'll get along with other people. You can cast two types of compatibility charts. A synastry chart compares and contrasts the planets in your chart and the other person's. A composite chart averages out your two charts using a "midpoint method." It creates a single, blended chart that reveals the essence of your relationship. A composite chart treats your relationship as if it was its own entity or a third "person" (which in many ways is true!). Try a compatibility astrology chart here > Astrology Charts for Planning Events You can do charts for people and also for events. Just put in the time, date and location of the event in question and you can cast an astrology chart for it. For example, if you're planning a party or a big pitch meeting, you can enter the time, date and location to see how the stars align. Want to know what's happening right now? Do today's astrology chart by simply entering today's date affect your birth details. Wondering what the year ahead holds? Check out an annual forecast chart that maps out the next 12 months. What about Vedic astrology charts? The Western astrology chart is depicted as a wheel divided into 12 different segments, or houses. It dates back to You can do a Vedic astrology chart (or Jyotish astrology chart) or a Chinese astrology chart, which will calculate the data differently. How long have these types of astrology charts been around? At Astrostyle, we work with the Western astrology system, which dates back thousands of years. Humans have tracked the movement of the heavens since civilization dawned. As far back as 6000 B.C. the Sumerians noted the journeys of planets and stars. Around 3300 B.C. the Babylonians (also known as the Chaldeans) began expanding upon what the Sumerians started, developing the first astrological system over thousands of years. They created the zodiac wheel that we use today (with planets and houses) around 700 B.C. The oldest known horoscope chart is believed to date to 409 B.C. Do a free astrology chart on Astrostyle! Not sure how to read your birth chart? First you need a Birth Chart Calculator. Here's one that we like: Astrology is a fascinating science. It uses birth charts to identify how the planets in our solar system affect human characteristics and tendencies. But learning how to read a chart can be tough at first. Here's a brief guide to getting started. Core Essence of the Chart The first points you want to identify are the sun, moon and rising signs. These are the primary drivers of the individual. The sun sign describes your will, individuality, ego, and natural talents. It will reveal why some things in life are so easy for you, as well as your default tendencies. It shows how you express yourself and from where your creative inspiration comes. Your moon sign describes your emotional nature and how it drives you. Think of it as a reigning emotional need you have to fulfill to feel safe or comfortable in any situation. Knowing your moon sign helps you gain control over your emotions. The ascendant, or rising sign, describes your physical body. You may have heard of the rising sign being described as the "mask" we all wear, and to a point that's true. But going deeper, it's the way you act and the mission or role in life you choose because you feel that's the best way to take on life's challenges. Assimilate these three points to get an understanding of your core essence. The sun says who you are, the moon explains how you feel, and the ascendant reveals how you act. Interpreting the Other Planets After figuring out the puzzle of these three planets, it's also important to know how the other planets in your chart are affecting you. We're not looking at aspects just yet; first we just want to get an idea of what each planet in its sign means. The easiest way to learn the meanings of planets in signs is to use templates. For example, let's say you were born while Mars was marching through Aries. You can use the keywords of Aries and Mars to fill in the template below: With my Mars in Aries, my sense of aggression, passion, and drive (Mars keywords) act impulsively, selfishly, and quickly (Aries keywords). Another example: With my Venus in Aries, my sense of beauty, relating, and pleasures (Venus keywords) act impulsively, selfishly, and quickly (Aries keywords). This simple template allows you to get a quick understanding of how their energies mix. You can easily see why Mars is the ruler of Aries whereas Venus doesn't do too well! Now do this for every planet in your chart, Delineating the Angles We move on to the houses, which describe life experience. Depending on which houses your planets are located, you experience their energies in different areas of life. Mars in Aries is felt very differently in the second house than in the tenth. The angles in particular are important because they highlight forceful life experiences that motivate us to action. They are the cusps of the first house (ascendant), fourth house (nadir), seventh house (descendant), and tenth house (midheaven). When planets are found here, they have more impact on the relevant areas. First House (Ascendant) - Planets found conjunct or in the first house affect your physical body, appearance and sense of identity. Fourth House (Nadir) - Planets here affect experiences of the home, mother, real estate, and personal emotions. Seventh House (Descendant) - With planets in the seventh, your personal relationships, close friendships, business partners, and dealings with the general public are affected. Tenth House (Midheaven) - Planets at the midheaven or in the tenth house affect your sense of ambition, work ethic, career, and the experience of the father. The angles detail core life patterns of development. Understanding them can be crucial to understanding your perceptions of self, others, family and vocation. After looking at these power houses, Examine how your planets affect the rest of your houses. Synthesis The aspects show how the planets are interacting with each other, but can be tough to learn at first. Most important is knowing what each placement means on its own. However, while it can be easy to describe what your sun sign means, integrating its effect with the plethora of other meanings takes a ton of practice. Synthesis is a higher order skill that requires intuition and imagination. Sometimes you have to take a risk of being wrong! In due time, you'll have more confidence and will be able to blend meanings together with ease. Anyway, that's a bit to get you started.
